Cécile Schnyder – L’Arche – How to live community well enough?

L’Arche Community is a Christian, international community in which people with and without learning disabilities share daily life together. We work together, share a house together, pray together, go to the pub together, but it is not always easy. We are people like you, people with different abilities, different opinions and different ideas. So how do we live community?

This evening will bring you a short introduction to the life of Jean Vanier (founder of L’Arche) and L’Arche international. As a long-term member of L’Arche I will tell you something about our community in London and introduce you to some of my friends.

Together we will discover what it means to live community.

Charlotte Steel – What does it take to make a community farm?

Charlotte Steel, General Manager will tell us the story of Sutton Community Farm, one of London's largest community food growing spaces right here in our borough. The journey began back in 2010 when the idea of a local farm was first conceived. Now, just over six years later, Sutton Community Farm supports over 3,000 volunteers and visitors every year, delivers freshly harvested VegBoxes to over 230 local households and grows over 14 tonnes of organically produced vegetables.

An Evening with Linda Regan and Brian Murphy

Join well-loved comedy actor Brian Murphy and his wife, actress and crime novelist Linda Regan, as they look back at their careers in film, theatre, television and fiction-writing.

Brian Murphy was an original member of Joan Littlewood’s Theatre Workshop, a jobbing actor in the 1960s and early 1970s, he was cast in the role which would make him a household name, as the lazy and scheming George Roper. He played opposite Yootha Joyce’s

Mildred in first Man About the House, with Richard O’Sullivan, Paula Wilcox and Sally Thomsett, and then George and Mildred, both hugely successful series, from 1973 until 1980. Later he appeared in Last of the Summer Wine.

Born into a theatrical family, Linda Regan has been a professional actress all her working life. Best remembered as April, the love-struck Yellowcoat, in the smash hit BBC sitcom Hi-De-Hi, Linda has worked extensively in television, appearing in both comedy and drama series. Linda is also a successful crime writer, her work frequently set in the sleazy underbelly of the entertainments industry.
